Description Working overseas is demanding and poses unique research challenges as well as risks to personal security and safety. This seven-day intensive subject teaches a range of applied research approaches, field skills, techniques and technologies to prepare students for operating safely overseas. The immersive scenario-based role-play learning is delivered at an off-site location. Drawing on United Nations accredited curriculum, the subject equips students with an appreciation for the major methodological, ethical, legal, logistical and personal challenges they are likely to confront when working 'in the field'. The unit is of special relevance to students seeking employment in Government and NGO sectors.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this subject, students should be able to:

1. produce a high-quality fieldwork-focused Research Plan, Ethics Application and Risk Management Plan with supporting documentation;
2. demonstrate a practical understanding of the University Risk Management, OHS, Security and Travel Guidelines;
3. understand the range of personal and institutional moral, legal and ethical issues involved with fieldwork;
4. articulate the pros and cons of specific research methods and analytical tools appropriate for addressing their fieldwork research question/problem
5. undertake applied research or work in a complex and hostile location;
6. demonstrate their awareness of the key personal security challenges confronting researchers in the field and how to respond appropriately to mitigate or manage such risks;
7. understand in advanced capacity what complex and hostile environments are, and be able to manage personal and research participant risks whilst undertaking effective research; and
8. make effective plans and decisions regarding fieldwork (prior to, during and after deployment) as part of an overarching research strategy.

Subject Content

1. A Fieldwork Philosophy
2. Scoping the research question/s in preparation for the field
