

BEHV 3018 PSYCHOLOGY AND THE ONLINE WORLD

Credit Points 10

Legacy Code 102350

Coordinator Mac Mingon (https://directory.westernsydney.edu.au/search/name/Mac Mingon/)

Description Digital technologies and online environments have transformed how people interact, communicate, and organise. This subject explores the intersection of psychology and these 'online worlds', and critically examines the potential benefits and challenges it presents. Students will learn about a variety of online behaviours and environments, including the formation of social movements, the spread of moral panics and conspiracy theories, along with the potential of online therapy and psychological interventions. By the end of the subject, students will be able to understand and evaluate the psychological aspects of online activities and apply this knowledge to real-world situations.
