Coordinator Alina Ewald (https://directory.westernsydney.edu.au/search/name/Alina Ewald/)

Description This subject covers the study and application of a broad range of psychological concepts, principles, theory, and methods that relate to crime and the law. This subject examines psychological processes and human behaviour in relation to the Australian legal and court system and the criminal justice system - and considers their application to real-world contexts through case studies and interactive tutorials. The subject also examines forensic mental health in relation to crime and the law with reference to multi-cultural and Indigenous peoples. Emphasis is placed upon the intersection of evidence-based psychology with criminal and legal processes. Topics include the role of memory and attention in witness testimony; age, gender culture and the criminal justice system, and forensic interviewing.
