Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this subject, students should be able to:

1. To give students the background needed to make them perceptive and critical observers of contemporary Australian society and politics;
2. To present the major issues of political conflict in Australia over the last sixty years;
3. To encourage students to analyse the class interests in various conflicts;
4. To encourage students to develop an awareness of Australia's role in international affairs as it has developed since 1920;
5. To provide students with an overview of themes in recent Australian history, especially as they relate to issues of Australian identity;
6. To encourage students to further incorporate primary sources in their studies of Australian history and to develop skills that will make this possible.
