Description This is a core component of the Bachelor of Arts (Interpreting and Translation) and a pool unit in some postgraduate courses. The unit is aimed at developing essential skills in interpreting and deals with the specialised technical skills necessary for the different modes of interpreting: dialogue, consecutive, simultaneous, and sight translation. Given the large amount of independent practice needed to develop competence in interpreting, it pays special attention to the teaching of techniques for autonomous learning. Lectures are held in English for students of all the languages available. The tutorials are language specific in Arabic, Japanese, Mandarin or Spanish.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this subject, students should be able to:

1. distinguish between spoken and written language in terms of content, structure, speed, text type, number of interlocutors, accent, etc;
2. apply knowledge about different speech styles, registers, social dialects and develop skills necessary to accurately render different discourses in the target language;
3. demonstrate an understanding of context-specific interpreting techniques used in dialogue, consecutive, simultaneous interpreting and sight translation;
4. improve listening skills in a variety of contexts such as business, immigration, tourism and motor transport, and develop techniques for autonomous learning of these skills;
5. use the memory skills required for dialogue interpreting and consecutive interpreting;
6. master the note taking skills necessary to accurately interpret in the long consecutive interpreting mode, and develop techniques for autonomous learning of these skills;
7. develop effective public speaking skills, including techniques for autonomous learning of these skills.
