Description This subject is designed to meet the needs of early childhood, primary and secondary teachers who are required to develop their pedagogical approaches in order to become culturally responsive educators that meet the specific needs of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander learners. Preservice teachers examine current research which supports the teaching of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander learners their particular educational settings. Through their development as teacher professionals the subject will provide opportunities for future teacher professionals to demonstrate their application of these pedagogical approaches and explain how this shapes their future classroom practice. This subject provides foundational experiences to engage with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander history, culture and education educational experiences in NSW. It provides opportunities for preservice teachers to explore praxis which is underpinned by research. The subject requires educators to apply appropriate application of cultural protocols which enables future teachers to successfully work with Aboriginal children, families and communities in ways that maximise learning outcomes for Aboriginal learners in a range of educational settings. This subject is included in the Development Phase of the Bachelor of Education.
