

WELF 7020 PRACTISING RESEARCH AND RESEARCHING PRACTICE

Credit Points 10

Legacy Code 102358

Coordinator Ireni Farag (https://directory.westernsydney.edu.au/search/name/Ireni Farag/)

Description This subject equips Therapy Studies students with the conceptual frameworks and skills needed to conduct basic research in the areas of counselling and psychotherapy. The question 'How do we know what we know?' becomes the connecting thread throughout an introduction to quantitative, qualitative and mixed method approaches to practitioner research. Building on considerations from the prerequisite subject WELF6001 Ethics and Diversity in Counselling, students will develop their understanding of research as a scholarly, professional, social and intersubjective practice. They will learn to generate answerable research questions and a coherent research proposal within appropriate intellectual and methodological frameworks.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this subject, students should be able to:

1. Demonstrate critical understanding of qualitative, quantitative and mixed method research design and its applications in counselling research.
2. Compare the strengths and limitations of a range of research methods in relation to the sub-discipline of counselling and psychotherapy.
3. Reflect constructively on the positioning of researchers and research participants in practitioner research.
4. Critically position and evaluate selected published research studies in counselling.

5. Frame an answerable research question that is significant and relevant for their field of practice, and plan how they would systematically approach this question.
6. Relate questions of method to research epistemology and an understanding of research as a scholarly, professional and social practice.
